NSF/NIH Sexual Harassment, Other Forms of Harassment, and Sexual Assault Notification Protocol

BACKGROUND

National Science Foundation

The National Science Foundation (NSF) has adopted a no-tolerance policy for sexual harassment, other forms of harassment, and sexual assault, within the agency, at awardee organizations, field sites or anywhere science or education is conducted. As such, NSF includes a term and condition concerning harassment as part of its award acceptance requirements, which pertains to Principal Investigators (PIs) and co-Principal Investigators (co-PIs) of NSF-funded projects, including co-PIs at subawardee institutions.

For NSF grants awarded to Seattle University after September 21, 2018, this institution's Authorized Organizational Representative (AOR) must notify NSF of any finding/determination if an NSF-funded PI or co-PI has violated SU's policies or codes of conduct, statutes, regulations, or executive orders relating to sexual harassment, other forms of harassment, or sexual assault; and/or if the PI or any co-PI has been placed on administrative leave or if any administrative action has been imposed on the PI or any co-PI relating any finding/determination or an investigation of an alleged violation of awardee policies or codes of conduct, statutes, regulations, or executive orders relating to sexual harassment, other forms of harassment, or sexual assault.

National Institutes of Health

The National Institutes of Health (NIH) is also addressing sexual harassment and other forms of harassment on NIH-funded projects, citing a 2018 National Academies report that states "federal agencies may be perpetuating the problem of sexual harassment." NIH requires all institutional grantees to have developed, disseminated and implemented policies and practices that foster a harassment-free environment, maintain a clear code of conduct, ensure employees are aware of internal policies and external laws, provide an easy way to report harassment, protection from retaliation, and respond promptly to allegations.

For NIH grants awarded to Seattle University, the institution must notify NIH if a PI or other key personnel named on an NIH grant award of administrative actions that removes senior/key personnel on an NIH award related to sexual harassment, other forms of harassment, or sexual assault.
